My Guided Reading Must Haves | Crazy for First Grade

Reading is probably one of my favourite things to teach in first grade. It is amazing the progress that these little first graders make over the course of a school year. Even if they don't make it to the end of Grade One goal (for us it is Level I/16), the lowest of readers can still make some sort of progress. It could be learning to track words or recognizing a few simple sight words or just ...

However, guided reading can also be done as a whole-class activity, providing students with support whilst allowing time for independent work to be done at their own pace. The stages below outline a guided reading lesson, and can be used by teachers when working with texts like those found in New Cornerstone as the technique is suitable for both fact and fiction.

Shanahan response: I do support the idea of teaching reading with grade level texts. The theory that there is a magical way to match kids to books that will increase learning simply hasn't panned out. Studies of the instructional level find that it at best makes no difference – that is, kids learn as much from grade level text as they do from instructional level ones. And, in the worst ...
