To dig post holes with post hole diggers, start by holding one handle in each hand with the handles close together. Then, thrust the blades into the ground where you want to dig your first hole. Once the blades are in the ground, spread the handles apart so the jaws of your post hole diggers close around the dirt. When you can't spread the handles any further, lift the post hole diggers out of the ground. Move them away from your hole and close the handles to release the dirt ...

When digging the posts holes, it is important that you keep your auger vertical (plumb) to assure that the holes are not dug at an angle. This will prove to be critical when placing the posts. If dug at an angle, you will be unable to keep the posts on the string because the bottom of the post hits the side of your incorrectly and angled hole. Thus, you will have to hand-dig the hole to ...
