Having read Netherwood, Jane Sanderson's earlier novel, which I deemed my best book of 2011, I eagerly awaited Ravenscliffe, and couldn't put it down. It drew me in from Chapter 1, and is well on the way to becoming my best read of 2012.

Well I've read all three of Jane Sanderson novels and its left me wanting more. I am a big Downton Abbey fan, but the story lines in Jane's books are far better. Every single character could have a book just about them. Eden Falls is Jane's best by far, Netherwood and Ravenscliffe are wonderful reads in their own rights, but Eden there is just something extra special. I had taken Eden's on my ...

Jane Sanderson's Ravenscliffe, the sequel to her Netherwood, is set in this transitional time period and populated with characters who highlight both the old and the new, working class, aristocracy, and a new breed of self-made man. And although I've read the first book in the series (there's another already out in England called Eden Falls), this second novel could certainly stand on its own ...
