T.H. White, the author of The Once and Future King and Mistress Masham's Repose, was a young writer who found himself rifling through old handbooks of falconry. A particular sentence — "the bird reverted to a feral state" — seized his imagination, and, White later wrote, "A longing came to my mind that I should be able to What is it that binds human beings to other animals?"

T.H. White was an young Englishman, recently retired as an English professor and starting a literary career in 1936 when he wrote this book. He had become a Thoreau-like recluse, living alone in a gamekeeper's cottage, "tired of most humans", when he received the fledging goshawk by mail-order from Germany. The book is his non-fiction log ...

Chronology of T.H. White's The Goshawk. White kept The Goshawk to himself for ten years and, when Cape got hold of the typescript by accident, was very reluctant to let them publish it (see T.H. White: a biography by Sylvia Townsend Warner). He was persuaded by his friend David Garnett, who wrote to Cape, "I think this is really Tim's best book."

Based upon T. H. White 's book of the same name, The Goshawk quietly blends the love of man with the stubborn intelligence of the hawk into a moving film of dignity and respect. In flashback the story of Gos is told. His arrival—a laundry basket wrapped in sacking. The first meal grudgingly accepted from the man's hand. The first night—the bird sleeping and the man ruminating on the ...
