I learned that in Athens and other parts of the world at that time, women were considered by men and by themselves inferior to men in status and in life style. They were restricted to certain roles and activities, such as motherhood, which was a contribution not only to their family, but also to the state, because the state needed more men to be born to fight wars, run the government, and contribute to other social activities such as art and literature, for example. Athenian woman were not ...

Women in ancient Athens had very little choices open to them. If they were lucky, they could read a little, play an instrument, and owned slaves to do the daily household tasks. Women could not vote nor own property. They could not choose whom to marry nor own/sell anything of great value. If you were a respectable woman, you could not even walk around town except occasionally to a neighbor ...

In Athens there was discrimination between: citizens and residents; legitimate born vs. illegitimate born; married vs. unmarried women. Philosophers considered that women had powerful emotions and low brains. For this reason, they needed protection from themselves. Each woman had her own guardian (the husband or the closest male member of the family) who had control over her life. She could ...

Women of Ancient Athens is a comprehensive study of the status and roles of women in the Classical Age of the 5th and 4th century BCE when the democratic Athens was the major city of the Western world. All the sources of information are male. The primary sources used fictional forms of expression: Euripides and Aristophanes the theater, Xenophon and Plato the dialogue very effectively. The iconography of paintings on vases and sculptures in stone supports and confirms the literary information.

Since respectable women in ancient Athens were not allowed to be outside without a male escort, the female slave was there to do all the errands outside the home. This is true only for wealthy women; poor women were not able to be kept in seclusion since they would not be able to afford a female slave to run their errands (Pomeroy 79). The wife of a male citizen was not allowed to be outside ...
